

Everyone is invited (in-person or online) to a lunch and learn event about the First Nations Innovation research project

Launch of the new SOCI 2804 online course, starts Jan 2014:
Colonialism, Development and the e-Community

This course explores the relationships between colonialism and technology development (broadband networks and digital information, communication and services). Considers, from a sociological perspective, the issues, institutions and actors involved in developing e-Community projects - networks and applications designed by and for remote and rural communities - with a focus on the opportunities and challenges for Indigenous communities in Canada.

UNB Department of Sociology

<http://www.unb.ca/fredericton/arts/departments/sociology/index.html>

First Nations Innovation Research Project

<http://fn-innovation-pn.com>

Monday, November 4, 2013
12:15 - 1:15pm Atlantic time

In person: UNB Carleton Hall room 205

A traditional lunch will be provided: corn chowder and fry bread / bannock

By videoconference - contact KO-KNET: lyle.johnson@knet.ca
Or watch the live webstream: <http://live.knet.ca/fninnovation>
(starts at 12:15 Atlantic, 11:15 Eastern, 10:15 Central)